CURE FOR SPARKING; OR, PICKING UP AN AUQUAINTANCE.

Some months since, a joyous, courageous young woman residing in Gotham, daughter of lighly respectable parents, found herself somewhat unintentionally detained at the house of a frical not far distant from her father's resiin pursuance of the Constitution and Laws of the United States, and of this State.

United States, and of this State. scarcely aware of the fact, night set in. The distance to her home was but a few blocks, however, and us she expected a little gathering of ladies and gentlemen at her father's that evening, she determined upon returning homeward unattended; and, bidding her friends good night, she hurried along upon the walk towards her residence, into which her family had recently removed from another part of the

Upon turning the corner, she was suddenly startled by the approach of a well-dressed man, who accosted her with "good evening," and offered his services to escort her home !-Alarmed for an instant, she would have avoided the stranger, but as he advanced to her side, she ventured to turn towards him, and a glance satisfied her; she recognized the young gentleman as a familiar acquaintance. Disguising her voice, and replying in a timid tone, which he would not forget. The conversation which passed was brief, and the beau suspecting nothing, as he was not aware that the family had changed their quarters, tripped along by the young lady's side, apparently very well pleased with his companion. In a few minutes they halted before a modest brick house, in a somewhat retired stree, at the west end, and the lady relinquished her attendant's arm, will you come ni?" whispered the lady

"Thank you," was the reply; and his fair companien opened the door. Closing it carefully, they found themselves in the entry, in

"Wait a moment," said the lady, "and be per feetly quiet-I will return immediately;" and with these words she ascended the stairs which led to the parlors.

The first thought of the young man as she retired, was to open the front door and move; for he suspected that all was not as he antici pate 1. He turned to the door—it was fast. He fumbled for the latch or lock, or whatever secured it, but it was not to be found; and an instant afterwards he heard footsteps approaching in the darkness. His heart thumped egainst his ribs, and he began to wish himself safely out of doors again; but he was quickly re-assured by the encouraging whisper of his new-made acquaintance: who approached him apparently with much caution.
"Hush!" said she, "all is sate. Be quiet, now, a moment-remove your boots from your feet-I will return in an instant" Our hero was content, drawing and off his boots he secured them together, and holding them in his Land, he awaited the return of his lady friend, who had again ascended the Entering the parler a few minutes afterwards, the female rogue found some half a score of young friends with their brothers and beaux present, to whom she quickly and briefy communicated the adventure.

"I've got him in the entry, down stairs," said she. "Put out the lights," she said, "keep perfectly still, don't betray the slightest breath or sound, and I will show you some sport, in a moment. The lights were removed, the party ar ranged themselves around the room-the courpany knew the victim intimately—and again the lady descended the stairs and approached her friend. "Softly, now," she said, taking the hard that was unoccupied with the boots, "softly. all is quiet up stairs-come," and she led her gallant slyly up the stairway. His boots danging against the railing. "-sh!" exclaimed the fair one, "for pity's sake make no poise -or else all is lost." The bean moved on grasped his boots more securely at his side. "nor dreamed of aught save bliss." Least of all did he suspect the existence of a huge rent in his stockings-but he was a bachelor, and this was but a trifle !

They entered the parlor. All was darkness and sience, the lady closed the door behind her companion, and led him into the centre of the room. Not a breath was heard, and little did the gentleman suspect that he was at that moment surrounded by a dozen persons of his "Remain here one moment," said the girl

"I will get a light." The gallant raised the soft hand which had conducted them thus far towards-he knew not what!—and ventured to press upon it a kiss; but it was dexteriously withdrawn at the very "nick of time," and his lips came in contact with his fingers.

"Wait a moment," said his inamorata. leav ing him quickly—and then passing through. she disappered. A minute had scarcely elapsed but it seemed a month to the little party, who were nearly choking with the suppressed merri nent; it was an age to the victim But gentle footsteps were again heard, and the beau gazed anxiously in the direction of the door. It opened with single movement, a blaze of light gushed into the parlor, and behind the face of an old familiar acquaintance! "Ladies and gentlemen," said she, "this is Mr. Smith." Such a "ha, ha," as went from that little coterie, at that moment was seldom heard in the neighborhood, before or since. Poor Smith stood for a moment, not exactly paralizedthat would be a faint term-exactly statueized in his tracks, and he hugged his boots to his side, coughed, sneezed, choked-then grinned a ghastly smile. As a on as the paroxysm of laughter was over, the lady brought forward a chair, and placing it before the victim, said : "Pray be seated, Mr. Smith."

He turned upon his tormentor a look of comical sociation, and the Falstaff, his wits coming quickly to his relief he repited:

*Did you think, Cally, I didnt know you?"

This was his first and last effort at picking up an acquaintance; and it proved to be a cure for 'sparking" with him. Within six months he made ample apology for his error by making Miss Calls, Mrs. Suith. A TRUE WOMAN .- When a man of sense comes to marry, it is a companion he wants, not an artist. It is not merely a creature who can paint or play, sing and dance; it is a be ing who can comfort and counsel him-onwho can reason and reflect, and feel and judge. and discriminate - one who can assist him. in his affairs, lighten his sorrows, purity his joys, strengthen his principles, and educate his children. Such is the woman who is fir for a mother and the mistress of a family -A woman of the former description may occasionally figure in the drawing-room, and at-fectual Alterative that can be made. It is a con-centrated extract of Para Sar-aparilla, so combined with other sub-tances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the iscuses Sarsaparilia is reputed to cure. It is be lieved that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumons complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immen e service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many

OF THE BLOOD. compound will be found a great promote of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many ranking disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul cruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptio is, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiates blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, cruptions, or sores; cleane it when you find it is obstructed and singgish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleaning the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown. Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many prep arations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Ex-tract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we fhink we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete condication from the system. secure their complete cradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the buttle.
